(57) Abstract: The device for conversion of wave energy into electrical energy consists of a supporting structure (300), the first working body (200), an anchor (500) and anchor cables (400). The supporting structure (300) is connected to the anchors (500) by anchor cables (400), while the first working body (200) is slidably connected to the supporting structure (300). The motion transformation system (100) is firmly connected to the supporting structure (300) and comprises rigid gears (101a) and (101b) toothed with gears (103a) and (103b) with rolls on one side while on the other side they are hinged to the first working body (200), on the other side of the gears (103a) and (103b) with the rolls, rigid gears (102a) and (102b) are connected at one end, while their other end is hinged to other working body (600).The gears (103a) and (103b) with rolls are connected by shafts with a multiplier that drives the generator (108) that further produces electricity. The device constructed in this way has the possibility of transport to the place of exploitation, because it floats stably on its own. The anchor system (500) is transported to the place of exploitation using a transport body (700) that also has the ability to float on its own and to submerge.

(54) Title: METHOD, APPARATUS, DEVICE AND SYSTEM FOR THE GENERATION OF ELECTRICITY
(57) Abstract: Electric Power Generation System generates electric power by capturing energy released from transmutation / conversion of one or more chemical element(s) into one or more other element/s, using any one or more elements of the periodic table. The captured energy is converted into electricity in a reactor. The system preferably includes a transmutation reactor and an energy capturing system coupled to the reactor that converts captured energy into electricity, and connecting the electric energy to the electric grid or uses it on site power generation. In particular, the energy released in the of transmutation process is directly converted into electric power. Preferably, transmutation products that emerge in the form of charged particles, X- rays and heat, release energy removed from the fusion product ions as they spiral past electrodes of an inverse cyclotron converter. Advantageously, the transmutation energy conversion system include target elements, paramagnetic and excited state mercury-based compound as a source of energy for transmutation of target elements, which releases energy in the form of charged particles, X- rays and heat. Direct energy pickup from the transmutation of elements and generation of energy, direct energy pickup to arc a chamber to produce a magnetic field for pick up with ferrite coil assemblies around the arc chamber to create electricity, collect the heat from the transmutation containment to drive a turbine, heat engine or other heat suitable device. In particular, the reactor that converts captured energy to electricity, stores electric energy and connects to the grid or to on-site power generation for all applications of electricity from kW to GW and fuel for transportation including spacecraft.
